

Capital in the Twenty-First Century Receives Top Honor for 2015 PROSE Awards

Washington, DC; February 5, 2015 - The winners of the prestigious 39th annual PROSE Awards (#PROSE Awards) were announced today during the annual Professional and Scholarly Publishing (PSP) Conference in Washington, DC. The highest honor, the R.R. Hawkins Award and a $10,000 prize for the author, went to The Belknap Press of Harvard University Press for Capital in the Twenty-First Century by Thomas Piketty.

The PROSE Awards are organized by the PSP Division of the Association of American Publishers (AAP) to honor noteworthy and original contributions to the professional and scholarly publishing world each year. For the seventh year in a row, the PROSE program attracted a record-breaking number of submissions: 540 entries of books, reference works, journals and electronic products in more than 50 categories.

Covering the arts, humanities, sciences, and math in book, journal and electronic form, the PROSE Awards are a recognition of excellence in each field. Winners were chosen by an independent, 14-person panel of peer publishers, librarians and academics. More than 200 attended the Awards Ceremony, which was live-streamed and live-tweeted from @PROSE Awards.

“Thomas Piketty’s magisterial new book, Capital in the Twenty-First Century is an economics book, a history book, a political science book, and a sociology book all rolled into one delightful package: an exciting and well-written look at income and wealth distribution,” said George Lobell, Economics Judge for the PROSE Awards. “This 685 page turner surveys the leading industrial economies over the last nearly 200 years with regard to how great wealth impacts economic incentives and economic growth. That it has sold more than half a million copies in its English edition is a testament to its great importance and the timeliness of its theme.”

The R.R. Hawkins is an esteemed award that recognizes the most exceptional professional, reference or scholarly work among the year’s Award for Excellence winners. Capital in the Twenty-First Century also won the Award for Excellence in Social Sciences and the Economics subject category.

“The PROSE Awards honor the greatest works in professional and scholarly publishing. These are the books and journals that change how we understand the world around us and benefit our society through the sharing of knowledge. Choosing a winner was difficult, as this year’s entries were some of the most remarkable that we’ve seen yet for educational and academic works,” said PROSE Awards Chairman John A. Jenkins, President and Publisher Emeritus of CQ Press, and Founder and CEO of Law Street Media.

Since 1976 the PSP Division of AAP has celebrated distinguished works in professional and scholarly publishing through the PROSE Awards. This year, five new award categories were established to recognize achievements in humanities, social sciences, physical sciences/mathematics, and biological/life science textbooks as well as a new outstanding scholarly work by a trade publisher category.

The Winners:

Each of the five “best of” awards were chosen from 54 book, reference, journal and eProduct categories. The R.R. Hawkins Award is awarded to the best work among that group.

About PSP and AAP

Members of the Association of American Publishers' Professional and Scholarly Publishing Division (PSP) publish, in print and electronic form, the vast majority of materials produced and used by scholars and professionals worldwide in science, medicine, technology, business, law and the humanities. Division members produce books, journals, computer software, databases and digital content. Its membership encompasses commercial publishing companies, professional societies and university presses.

The Association of American Publishers (AAP) is the voice of the US book and journal publishing industry. AAP represents the industry's priorities on policy, legislative and regulatory issues regionally, nationally and worldwide. These include the protection of intellectual property rights and worldwide copyright enforcement, digital and new technology issues, funding for education and libraries, tax and trade, censorship and literacy. More than four hundred companies are members, spanning all categories of publishing. Our members represent the major commercial, educational and professional companies as well as independents, non-profits, university presses and scholarly societies.
